INTRODUCTION

The Film, TV and Interactive Digital Media industries are highly competitive, but not impossible to break into. There is no 'right' way to go about negotiating a pathway into these industries. This guide provides an overview of the types of training opportunities, work experience and networking initiatives available to newcomers, as well as to those currently working in the industry looking to develop their skills. While it is not possible to provide a complete list of all initiatives, this guide gives examples of the types of initiatives on offer and where to find information on them.

It is important to research and gather as much information about the industry as possible and this guide is designed to assist you in finding this information. To further help you in your research, contact details for the organisations and publications referred to in this guide are listed in alphabetical order at the back of this handout. In the provided list of contacts there are many networks, clubs and industry societies, which provide subscription e-newsletters and regular updates on industry news. There are many different ways to get a foot in the door; this guide provides a number of options for you to pursue.

WORK EXPERIENCE, EMPLOYMENT AND FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES

Production companies

Some production companies and producers are willing to offer work experience to students or people interested in getting into the film and TV industry. Generally work experience is unpaid. To approach production companies and producers directly, you will need to access lists of production companies and producers from industry directories. The main industry directories the Encore Directory and The Production Book can be found online at:

www.encoredirectory.com.au and www.productionbook.com.au

Please note that most production companies are small and may not be able to offer work experience.

Production reports

- Screen Australia's Upcoming Production Report (UPR) is published every month online. The UPR is a select list of features, short features, TV drama and documentaries currently in pre- to post-production in Australia. Please note that producers and production companies can be inundated with calls regarding work and may not welcome unsolicited enquires. Their preference may be to employ via crewing agencies. Some producers and production companies request that their contact details are not published and where contact details are omitted in the UPR, they are unavailable for publication. Foreign productions generally employ a line producer to set up the production office in Australia a few months before the principal photography date, and Screen Australia will not be able to provide production office contact details until the production office is set up.
www.screenaustralia.gov.au/productions/upr.aspx
- Encore Magazine provides a comprehensive snapshot of what's happening in the film, television and digital media industry. As well as the latest news, their site provides recruitment opportunities, a calendar of upcoming events, classified advertising and a comprehensive industry directory (subscribers only).

INTERACTIVE DIGITAL MEDIA

Government funding

Most film agencies in Australia offer funding programs specific to digital media. Information on Screen Australia funding can be found at:

www.screenaustralia.gov.au/funding/allmedia/default.aspx

For a full list of government film agencies, see Government funding initiatives on page 5. Other government organisations also offer funding for digital and new media schemes:

Federal

- The Australia Council

Supports a range of digital media, interdisciplinary and hybrid art projects. An Inter-Arts Office supports interdisciplinary and hybrid arts practice. New media art applications are supported primarily through the Visual Arts/Craft Board and Music Board. Staff of the Inter-Arts Office can provide advice on which board may be most appropriate if you are unsure where your application best fits.

www.ozco.gov.au

State

- Arts Queensland

Distributes funding through its programs of assistance, and applicants may include digital media projects in their submissions.

www.arts.qld.gov.au

- Multimedia Victoria (MMV)

Works to grow the Information and Communication Technology (ICT) sector, and drive economic growth through access to and use of sophisticated ICT.

Screen Australia Indigenous Department

The Indigenous Department develops initiatives and strategies that support the professional development of Indigenous film practitioners and their work. This is done through funding programs that invest in the development and production of outstanding and distinctive Indigenous projects across all genres and mediums.

The Department offers professional development to filmmakers by providing both development and production investment funding for drama, documentary, animation and interactive digital media projects. The Department also offers internships for filmmakers to work with more experienced practitioners and Travel Grants for filmmakers who have been selected for key international film festivals.

The Department also contributes to policy within Screen Australia and the wider Australian industry.

For more information on funding programs, guidelines and current initiatives please go to www.screenaustralia.gov.au/funding/indigenous/default.aspx

Or call the Indigenous Department on 02 8113 5889 or toll free 1800 226 615.

The Department offers funding for:

Other support for Indigenous filmmakers

- The Australian Film Television and Radio School (AFTRS) Indigenous Program Initiatives (IPI)
A national program designed to upgrade the creative and technical skills of Indigenous Australians already working in the film, broadcast and related industries, and to assist them to progress into key creative positions. AFTRS' specific objective is to increase the number of Indigenous Australian producers, directors and scriptwriters, and thus increase the number of Indigenous voices in our film, video and digital industries.
www.aftrs.edu.au
- The Australian Indigenous Communication Association (AICA) Incorporated
A body that represents members of the national Indigenous media and communications industry. The representative association advocates for, and formulates policy on behalf of, the communications sector. Sector representation includes broadcasting, print communication, online communication, film, video and TV.
www.aica.asn.au

- The Black Book Directory
 The portal to Indigenous arts and media in Australia: 2,700 descriptive listings of Indigenous organisations and individuals working across 95 professions in the arts, media and cultural industries. Plus listings of 2,000 creative works by Indigenous people – publications, music, film and television productions – from the late 1890s until now, including details of the artist, publisher, release date, distributor contacts and synopsis. Plus jobs and training opportunities for Indigenous people in the arts and media, and an events diary.
www.theblackbook.com.au/directory.asp
- The Central Australian Aboriginal Media Association (CAAMA)
 Owned by the Aboriginal people of Central Australia, CAAMA has a clear mandate to promote Aboriginal culture, language, dance, and music, while generating economic benefits in the form of training, employment and income generation. CAAMA produces media products that engender pride in Aboriginal culture, and informs and educates the wider community about the richness and diversity of the Aboriginal peoples of Australia. The CAAMA Group comprises: 8 KIN FM, a radio network; CAAMA Shops, a retail, wholesale and distribution business; CAAMA Music, a recording studio and record label that produces Indigenous music for the world; CAAMA Productions, a film and television production company that produces world-class programs about Aboriginal culture, lifestyles and issues; and Imparja Television, a commercial television station that broadcasts via satellite to one of the largest television service areas in the world.

- ScreenWest's Indigenous Filmex initiative (INDEX)
 Designed to extend the experience of Indigenous filmmakers, particularly directors, writers and producers, by supporting the production of short films.
www.screenwest.com.au
- Metro Screen, Sydney, NSW
 Administers the Lester Bostock Scheme, a joint initiative between Metro Screen and the NSW Film and Television Office (FTO), offering Indigenous storytellers the opportunity to make a short film. Participants have access to free training, equipment and facilities, plus they team up with an experienced industry producer/director who acts as a mentor to guide them through the production process. The aim of the scheme is to encourage new Indigenous filmmakers living in NSW to present ideas, develop their skills and experience in television and video production, and increase their prospects for employment in the film and television industry. An Indigenous mentor/producer assists each filmmaker through the development, production and post-production of their project.

NETWORKING AND MARKETING OPPORTUNITIES

Festivals

There are many festivals held around Australia for entrants of all levels. Film festivals are a good opportunity for new filmmakers working on low budgets or inexperienced filmmakers experimenting to have their projects viewed and exhibited. Festivals help gain useful critical feedback as well as public notoriety. Festivals are also a good networking ground; often have events such as question and answer time with the established filmmakers and meet and greet nights where you can meet other industry members.

Below are some examples of festivals which take entries of all levels, although you can find out more through the trade magazines such as Encore, Screen Hub and Inside Film

- BooHoo films is a monthly competition for filmmakers in Inner West Sydney, culminating with two finals in the year, the first in June and the second in November. Audience popularity determines the finalists with prizes to be won along the way. An independent judging panel selects the winner in the two finals. Cash, prizes and the BooHoo trophy to be won.
www.boohoofilms.com.au/contact.html
- Melbourne Underground Film Festival was established in 2000 and held annually to encourage the independent film industry. This festival communicates mainly through press releases, which can be subscribed to at the following web address:
www.muff.com.au/
- The Shoot Out is held over a period of 24 hours and provides a competitive and stimulating environment for filmmakers to try out new ideas, generating an interest in filmmaking at a grassroots level and encouraging both participants and spectators. This festival is held in Newcastle (NSW), Toowoomba (Qld), Geelong (Vic), Hamilton (Qld) and Boulder (New Zealand) in order to broaden and encourage potential in regional areas.
www.theshootout.com.au/map/index.html

Check upcoming events on Screen Australia's events web page:

www.screenaustralia.gov.au/news_and_events/Events.aspx

Subscribe to the free industry newsletters published by your local state government agency and local screen development and resource organisation, the subscription-based newsletters Encore, IF Magazine and Screen Hub, or pick up the free newspaper RealTime + OnScreen (available free from selected cinemas, cafes and galleries). All of the above publish information and updates of upcoming awards, competitions, exhibitions, festivals, screenings, seminars and workshops.

Member-based unions, guilds and associations run seminars, conferences and events, and publish newsletters (see Industry guilds and associations, page 6).

Below is a list of some of the conferences, events and networking opportunities on offer.

www.nafa.net.au
- Parnassus' Den
A Sydney-based forum for the development of new Australian writing for theatre, film, TV and radio. Professional actors read new scripts written by emerging and established Australian writers, then the audience is invited to comment. Parnassus' Den has its own ensemble of 75 actors across all age ranges, and all scripts are rehearsed in advance. There is also a directory of directors, enabling writers to have the experience and expertise of people working in the industry to help them produce the best possible readings.
www.parnassusden.org.au

- Popcorn Taxi

Holds regular events in Melbourne and Sydney, where filmmakers and enthusiasts can meet, watch films of all types, and discuss the filmmaking process. The focus is on the filmmakers' craft and careers rather than tabloid-like gossip. The moderators/interviewers (often filmmakers themselves) aim in most sessions to explore why the filmmakers made the choices they did, and how they brought their visions to the screen. The guests are producers, directors, editors, cinematographers, visual effects supervisors, designers, composers and actors.

www.popcorn-taxi.com.au

- SPAA Fringe Conference

Australia's leading annual conference for emerging and low-budget film and television producers, and for emerging writers and directors who want to find a producer. Fringe is an intensive and interactive three-day course of informative and practical sessions that offers a unique opportunity for newcomers to meet and learn from producers, directors, distributors and network commissioning editors. Delegates attend Fringe to network, pitch ideas and gain development opportunities.
